ABOUT THE EXHIBITION

Using both traditional and unexpected mediums, the works featured in this exhibition create a visual dialogue that examine the anthropological nuances of the lingua franca that result from a shared sense of nostalgia. The onlooker is taken on a discernible journey of identity, into a universe where popular culture references are king, and role-playing with iconography is highly encouraged. These suggested moments are sentimentally juxtaposed with a convergence of heroic fantasies, alternate realities and the weighty burdens that come with the expectation of growing up. REPLAY is a delightful and at times, whimsical, exploration of what happens when childhood notions are viewed through the adult lens of an Proustian involuntary memory, or as some might simply say - "a throwback."

COLLAGE

Instructions:

Suggested materials: paper, old magazines, comic books, glue, paint, scissors

After looking at the artworks, study the repeating patterns and shapes, the lines created by repetition. Have the students create a story told out of found images.

Leap of Faith by Cube works.

MY EVERYDAY HERO PORTRAIT

Heroes #: 006 - Spiderman Hanging His Laundry, Van Nuys, CA 2006 by Gregg Segal

Instructions:

As a classroom, discuss what makes a person a “hero” and review examples of heroic actions in the twentieth century. Reflect on how small actions can make big changes.

Have each student choose someone in their daily lives they believe embody the traits of a Super Hero and create a portrait of their likeness.

- What would their superpower be?
- What might their costume look like?
- Would they have a slogan?
